

Homework1 Reading a Picture - Life before World War One

History Skills: Reading a picture - a picture can tell a thousand words, but as historians, what can we learn from a picture source?

TASK - 1. Look at the two pictures below. In the box next to them write down everything you can see in the pictures. Use the description to help you.

2. What can you infer from the photographs? Infer means when you know something but you can't see it in the picture. For example I can infer from the picture that the people must have enough money to buy the wood so they are not very poor.

A street hawker is selling wood to use in the home as there is a coal strike.

Write what you can see in this box (Try to describe the picture to someone on the other end of your phone who cannot see it).

I can infer...

Women clearing up after the outside toilet wall and roof collapsed.

What can you see in the photograph?

I can infer....

What can you learn from the Sources about people before World War One? (4 marks) You need to write about two main points and use PEE (Point, evidence, explain).
